

Name: _____

OCTOBER ACROSTIC POEMS

Poem 1

Owls
Costume
Treats
Orange
Eat
Lek!
Raking

Poem 2

Orange leaves begin to drift and fall,
Crisp, chilly autumn breezes start to blow.
The harvest moon shines brightly over all,
Ongoing nights begin to stretch and grow.
Blankets of amber, gold, and rustic red,
Every pumpkin carved with glowing eyes,
Rustling trees now tuck the earth to bed.

Poem 3

Overhead, the canopy turns to gold,
Crisp winds then scatter them around,
Tumbling and dancing through the cold,
Only to settle on the frosty ground.
Blankets of amber warm the chilly view,
Every branch now whispering a soft goodbye,
Ready for the winter sky.

Name: _____

1. Reread poem 1. What holiday do these words make you think of?

2. Reread poem 2. The poem mentions that nights "begin to stretch and grow." What does this tell you about how daylight changes during October?

3. Reread poem 3. Where do the leaves finally settle after dancing through the cold?

4. Reread poem 3. List one example of personification from the poem.

5. Poems 2 and 3 use the phrase "blankets of amber." What are these "blankets" actually made of?
